

First, I would like to thank all of you for coming out today – the fact that you are here is acknowledgement that you understand the true meaning of today's observances –

On Memorial Day, we are not honoring those who have served, but those that made the ultimate sacrifice. Those brave men and women who gave their last full measure of devotion in the defense of this country. They shed their blood so that we could be free and commemorate this solemn day with our loved ones.

For those that have attended my events in the past, you would know that I always like to pay homage to those Barrington Heroes that fought and died. Today I wish to pay my respect to Barrington's Greatest Generation.

During World War 2 over 1000 men and women of Barrington answered our nation's call, representing just over 16% of the town's population at the time.

But 26 of our native sons would have their lives cut short, with many being laid to rest on foreign lands or lost in distant seas. These men were fathers, sons, brothers, nephews, cousins and friends.

They are more than just names on a bronze plaque and hopefully, for a moment in time, I can bring back some of their memories - As one is never truly dead until they are forgotten.

So, I will recount their lives in chronological order from which they left us using historical and genealogical data. Please forgive me for any errors of omission due to clerical inaccuracies of the record...
